

If you think you scored less and don't want to retake it, then try to make the other parts of your application strong like the SOP, GPA and LOR's. In general, any score above 320 is a great score and you should be above most of the universities' average scores.

MY GRE PLAN: I started studying in the last week of November after the end semester exams to be exact, from the 24th of November and my GRE was on the 16th of December. I had around 25 days. I started with taking a mock and then started to study vocal and also doing about 2 chapters of the quant exercises from the Manhattan 5LB book. After I was done with that, I took the GRE Official Books and had a glance. I practiced the verbal from it. I was also watching the videos of GregMat about the same time. By 12th December I was done with the preparation so I started to take mock tests (Powerprep mock tests that are available after you book the GRE test) and then I went and gave the test.

You get your Quant and Verbal scores just after the exam ends and it is displayed on your screen and the official report with the AWA scores is available in 10-15 days after you take the test.
