

3. To stay away from Total Critics: These are the people who don't find anything good about your products. Listening to this class will possibly result in a loss of productivity.

The founding team should not waste much time just building MVP, as this may result in demotivation for some people. If a team couldn't decide on their own, they can seek outside help.

